Angel

By Roxanna

Published on Lush Stories on 15 Jan 2013

Salvation

http://www.lushstories.com/stories/love-poems/angel-3.aspx

You came to me in a dream

Kissed my tears away

Told me it would be okay

Held me against your chest

Whispered for me to rest

Nestled in your arms

Worked like magic charms

Little by little the pain receded

My shattered heart no longer impeded

Your tender words of hope

With them I knew I could cope

You came to me in a dream

Kissed my tears away

Told me it would be okay

Held me against your chest

Whispered for me to rest

Nestled in your arms

Evaporated my alarms

I knew without a doubt

That you’d remain devout

With the jagged pieces of my heart

You mapped out a new chart

You came to me in a dream

Kissed my tears away

Told me it would be okay

Held me against your chest

Whispered for me to rest

Damaged as I was, you still offered me your love

I asked you “Are you an angel from above?”

You chuckled and said “Nay, I am but I am in love.”

Your eyes shone with sincerity

I couldn’t doubt their verity

You came to me in a dream

Kissed my tears away

Told me it would be okay

Held me against your chest

Whispered for me to rest

My pillar, my rock

You are made of sturdy stock

To have mended my broken shell

Brought back, that, which had been easily dispelled

My essence, my soul

That you have tenderly consoled