I want to catch your gaze across
A room of other girls;
To earn a smile that's just for me,
Your diamond amongst pearls.

I want to see your eyes just graze
The cotton of my dress -
Tenderness's twinkling fun
Removing my distress.

I want to feel your warm, firm touch
That holds my heart so safe,
With no fear of Rejection's cold
Or Scornful Mocking's chafe.

I want to be your favourite toy,
The one that you like best;
The one you'll cuddle, use lots, love,
Whilst playing or at rest.

I want to feel direct connection,
To know what's in your mind,
To hear your heart speak future hopes,
And know what's left behind.

I want your hands to guide me
On the road that Normals travel;
To know that my companion loves
To make my fears unravel.

I want to let you make me whole,
To be who you desire;
To know that I support you too,
Provide what you require.

I want you as my One True Love,
To know that when you take me,
The grin and fun of horniness
Will follow when you break me.

I want you to wipe away my tears
That come from being broken -
Gone, Sorrow, from my lonely past;
Now, Joy abounds unspoken.
