

Love Birds

By Milik_the_Red

Published on Lush Stories on 20 Mar 2010

All stories are the property of Milik the Red. They cannot be reproduced without written consent

A story of growth and love

<https://www.lushstories.com/stories/love-poems/love-birds.aspx>

In the dawn of the morning I watched the skies And beheld the Sun and watched it rise, The fiery hues and sapphire dyes Were pure amazement to my young tender eyes. And as the dawn grew, I did so too, And I stretched out my wings, as all young ones do, up into the satiny cloud tops I flew, Searching for something, so fresh and new. I followed no path and wandered so long And had no direction til' I heard your song A melody so pure, true and strong I knew my in heart it could never be wrong We flew off together in the midday sun Over the plains where the wide rivers run Riding the wind with free abandon and singing such songs as have been never sung. In joy we soared without fear I never felt pain with you so near Forever in my heart I held you dear with never a reason to shed but a tear. I found in you the most joyous of things Love and devotion and all that it brings From the moment I saw you, you pulled my heart strings and we never regretted or sorrowed it seems. Together in love we traveled the land Flying over the forests and desert sands We followed the sun, and laughed hand in hand Making our music, a right happy band. But as the sun set, I flew in the sight Of a man with a gun and his terrible might The report of the shot filled you with fright And you screamed to the darkness as I fell from the light. The darkness descends as the Sun drops away And the cold of the night forever holds sway But know that my love for you ever will stay And the coming of dawn will bring a new day.