Finally, we crossed that thin line...

Did you do something different today? Was it the new perfume Or was it the magic you casted on me Turning this ordinary day into extraordinary It all started just another day in the office Chatting, laughing, flirting A warm hug, a gentle peck on your cheeks And a borderline dirty joke made you giggling But there was something different about you today Your scent, fresh and intoxicating Your body, warm and alluring Your eyes, bright and dazzling Before we knew it The hug, became passionate embrace The kiss, landed on your delicious lips The flirting, turned into lover's whisper Office door locked, desk swiped Buttons loosed, shirts ripped Lips sealed on each other Hands, caressed on the bare skin Eyes, burnt with desire Souls, indulged with lust Suddenly, We paused, hesitated Shall we stop? You asked. Looking into your enticing eyes, Behind all the yearning and craving I saw fear The anxiety for taking the path of no return The dread of our friendship goes sore The terror of losing me In your eyes, lingering For weeks, months, years, We persuaded ourselves to be friends only Suppressing all that passion for each other Until today Released, erupted, exploded Looking into your eyes I buried myself into you Inhaling your scent Tasting your body Taking your soul Your body was hot Against that cold hard glass window I could feel all the passion, desire, lusts Burning Burst into flames Brighten our life and souls When we finally collapsed on the floor As you rest your head on my shoulder You asked, voice trembled, confused, lost So, what will we do now?
Do you want to forget what had happened? No, I answered Slowly, firmly With a kiss on your forehead Forever I have no regret
