It's that empty place inside; from it I always try to hide. But it follows me around; to my mind it's tied and bound. My heart bleeds like it has been stabbed; sweet memories are now stained with sadness. Left not knowing what to do or why; hopelessness I've got no will to try. You are not who I thought you were; but I don't know, I haven't heard. Incomplete and left to wonder; all the plans we had are they thrown asunder? I bounce between love and hate; how much longer can I wait? I really thought you were the one; now I'm not having any fun. Tormented by a memory; of you wanting everything I need. You disappeared in a puff of smoke; I am astonished, is this a joke? Why won't you return my call; after daily contact you ditch it all? I feel alone and so deceived; I'm not sure, did you really leave? Do you still have that dream about me; trussing you up tight in my corset so you can hardly breathe? Bend you right over and take you there; beyond the sex we had, do you even care? How could someone I thought was as sweet as can be; turn without notice and be so cruel to me? My search is over, I feel I'm done; from my needs I will just run. Bottle them up and throw them away; never to see the light of day. Just a sweet memory that has come undone; turned into the thing I now must shun. Put up cold and left hung out to dry; all I can do is sit here and wonder why? It would be so much easier to let go; if you returned my possessions and eased my woes. Will I ever talk to you again, who the hell knows if you're still my friend? Left with nothing but questions and angst; for all I gave you, is there no thanks? Guess there is no point in wondering why; I'm switching to girls and giving up guys.
