There he sits Upon his lofty precipice His tall pedestal Risen up in my eyes, my heart, Untouchable Unattainable And yet I touch him, as I can So deeply So fully As I sing for him The music of my body yearning for him The sigh, that sweet, happy sigh That escapes me only for him And I speak the words That fill his ears... his heart Of how he sets my soul So darkly ablaze And drown so readily In the light of his regard Of how he stills my breath And quickens my pulse How he feeds the hunger And quiets the storm How he thrills my mind And tempers my passion Of how he raises me up Into the rarefied heights To gasp with Sweetest sorrow As I can only imagine What it would be To taste his elusive scent Upon my breath And speak the words That send The tendrils of my presence Deep into the fibre of his being Even across the vast divide Across the world And all the heavens Yes even the very universe To enfold him And hold him In the confines of my heart And set him free As he sets me free From where he sits Alone Untouchable With eyes that blaze so Darkly... For me...
