

For Amie, forever

By Richard_M_Williams

Published on Lush Stories on 18 Jun 2013

A declaration made. A promise to keep.

<https://www.lushstories.com/stories/love-poems/for-amie-forever.aspx>

What was I, before I saw you? Was I even truly alive? What was dead, now breathes anew; For this love I can strive. If only it had been you from the start, When in darkness I was bound. Now that you rule my heart, Only in the light, can I be found. No need for heaven, in your embrace. Only to my goddess can I be devout. Aphrodite weeps at her disgrace; From your eyes, the stars shine out. Reality interrupts my sensual caress. To melancholy, my passion gives way. Your love I do not possess. I am still alone today. Still I hold on to this dream. A vow made before all creation. This is a love I will redeem And prove my adoration. My angel, with your inspiration; I shall raise my soul to bold endeavour And always leave this sweet dedication: For Amie, forever.