It is in the wee hours of the morning
In that moment before waking
When the world is blissfully silent
And the whole universe turns on a sigh
That I dream of you... Your hand as it reaches for me
The brush of your fingertips against my brow
The supple touch of your lips against
The corner of my mouth
I inhale as you inhale
And smile
The sweet caress of indrawn breath
Across my skin
As you nuzzle your nose into my neck
I dream... Of the tender smile that precedes Your tongue dancing over my collar bone
Your hand that slides, searching
Across burning, naked flesh
And your fingertips that pluck at my knotted bud
My arching spine
And trembling body
As your wicked mouth
Torments my lips
with your lips
And I Gasp out loud
As I try to smother your breath
With my heated core
That is as wet as water
And yearning for you to slip
The essence of all you are Inside me
I dream of the nails
That rake across the ghost of my soul
As you fill me again and again
With the proof of your love
And I waken with
The cry of your name in my heart
My always
My forever
My love...
