My lover is gone. I know not why. Left without saying bye-bye

Here I sit broken hearted. My love has left My heart and soul are parted. She took it with her. I miss those lips That met at the mound of fur. I want those full soft lips. I need the smile of her face. I loved the thrust of her hips. She had me by my manhood. Her lips surrounded me She held on, turning it to wood. The stroking made me moan And when she stopped I would utter a loud groan. I kissed her erect hard nipples, When I caressed her breasts, Her feelings inside came in ripples. When she came she started shaking. When I came inside her I could feel she wasn't faking. All is gone I know not why. She walked out the door Without a simple bye-bye
