My love for him is not a lie

There are so many things I could tell you
If I were brave, Such as I'm not jealous
Of all your friend girls, But then I would lie.
I could tell you I'm Strong and brave
And self-confident And you traveling to see
Other friend girls (Or them traveling to see you)
Doesn't bother me, But then I would lie.
I could tell you that The age difference
Between us doesn't matter To either you or I,
But then I would lie. I could tell you I'm not Afraid of the unknown The uncertainty of tomorrow,
The pain of yesterday, Or that the endless possibilities
Don't frighten me, But then I would lie.
But you know what Frightens me the most?
Never standing up For what I want For what I love
For what I will fight for Which is you and me together,
And that is most certainly not a lie. And if revealing to you my Utmost fears and longings Makes me most vulnerable, I find I do not care because Then at least for once I have been honest and true,
And you now know how much I love you, And about that I most assuredly would not lie.
