Today was busy An opening, dinner and a movie Then a walk along the river Before heading home...
Once there it was time to relax, Opening the veranda doors, stepping out Walking over, leaning against the railing, Looking out at the city lights. I hear you walk out Placing two glasses on the table Before walking over to me, "What are you thinking about?" you ask "Us "I reply Smiling, wrapping your arms around me Pulling me against you, My back pressed against your chest As you kiss my cheek. Standing in silence Watching the lights flicker for a few moments Before turning to face you Looking in your eyes Feeling your hands on my waist as you pull me closer Kissing you softly Before the hunger Need took over. Your hand moving from my waist To gently caress my breast Moaning against your lips As you rub my nipples making them hard Wrapping my arms around your neck As you carried me to the bed.
