

Simplest Love

By gill4

Published on Lush Stories on 12 May 2012

This story/composition is sole property of its author. All are welcome to share it as long as the author is included in a reference citation.

<https://www.lushstories.com/stories/love-poems/simplest-love.aspx>

If the simplest love were a spice, My love for you would be a sumptuous buffet Leading you to forget that you were ever hungry. If the simplest love were a color, My love for you would be a vast rainbow Which would illuminate your path to joy. If the simplest love were a tone, My love for you would be an orchestra That would play the soundtrack of your heart. If the simplest love were a flower, My love for you would be an everlasting bouquet With the fragrances to comfort your soul. If the simplest love were a feather, My love for you would be a large bird Whose expansive wings would carry you to ecstasy.