

Soulful Dreamer

By AllieMac

Published on Lush Stories on 23 Jun 2011

Copyright ©2011 Allison McAllister @ Lushstories.com . All Rights Reserved.

<https://www.lushstories.com/stories/love-poems/soulful-dreamer.aspx>

Never mind me I am such a soulful dreamer Often I make more than there is Building my castles so much bigger Than I've ever been able To live within Baby, I paint with such broad strokes This color wheel of mine Has been mixed so often Can't tell my white from my grey I am not made of the common things You find so often in another My insides come apart different They're never neat, clean, edges I am so jagged So fragile in my existence This cover seems so thick under the moonlight So pristine in its shelter But it's deceiving In all of its painful rebuffing It 's just my preferred hiding Away from the rays of light Betraying my see through covering I am fragile, so easily broken All of these scars Are the records I keep Of the steps I've fallen on So many lessons learned Too many broken ideals Falling at my feet Leaving me lingering In the contents of my mind Would love to bring you inside So you could taste my nectar Breathe in my atmosphere Becoming a piece of this tapestry I walk around with Lying right underneath All of this woman before you This grown adult I've become It's so underneath, undercover More than the me, you see