Time stood still As you walked away from me All I could hear were your footsteps Confident, happy, relieved
Time stood still As you uttered those words "I don't want you." But my heart will not break this time
This time I walk away With my head held high Knowing that I can do better That I have done better
I will survive this And be better for it I will find that special someone That will love me for me
That will make me happy Because I know that I am worth it I am worth the effort The love The respect
You will come to see That I was the best thing for you But you were not the best thing for me This I know
