

Thinking of You

By JustTK

Published on Lush Stories on 13 Jun 2011

For Nicole H, Wherever you are.....

<https://www.lushstories.com/stories/love-poems/thinking-of-you-3.aspx>

I still think of you As beautiful as you were When I first met you And didn't know of your flaws I still think of you When we went to the movies And threw popcorn all over What a great time we had I still think of you Calling me to talk And telling me I'm great And me telling you the same I still think of you And how I showed up to your house To spend the weekend with you alone But you left with someone else I still think of you When I found out your addictions And the pain it caused your family And the downfall of your life I still think of you When you called me crying Wanting me to take you away And that time I refused I still think of you Apologizing for using me And promising you'd change But hollow promises can't survive I still think of you Of how you needed me to help And I refused and said I'm fed up And we never talked again I still think of you After five long years Regretting turning you away Because I loved you so much I still think of you But not the pain you caused me But the beauty you were Underneath your slimy shell I still think of you As the best time of my life And the worst time of my life And the love of my life I still think of you And think of how I forgive you And I can't forget you Oh so much I love you I'll still think of you When I'm growing too old to think And I'll always wish I kept you close And helped you realize your greatness For Nicole, I miss you and I love you.